Music review
The Platinum Collection
QUEEN

The Platinum collection, the best album of music you can get. If you like Queen and dancing to do catchy songs, this collection is for you. It is a mix of greatest hits number I greatest hits number II and greatest hits number III all in one collection. Everybody knows Queen and at least one of their songs. For me even nowadays their songs remain in our heads. It's not only the music, but also the story behind it. For me, what makes it so special is also the music with many big artists like David Bowie.

About 1 billion people have bought the Queen albums all over the world

They're one of the few phenomena who deliver on the hype, regardless of how you approach them. Hate or love proggy album suites? Doesn't matter, Queen will make you feel good about your choice. Freddie Mercury (born Farrokh Bulsara on the British colony of Zanzibar, East Africa), guitarist Brian May, drummer Roger Taylor, and bassist John Deacon comprised one of the most successful, effective, and productive bands of the rock era--indeed, by some estimates, the most successful rock band of all time. They should be proud of the group.

Thanks to Queen even if you're having a rough and bad day, the love, the power, the joy, the passion and the freedom they put in the music is just wonderful to listen to. We get to see that throughout the 15 hits of the album, there are times in the lives where things can get hard, but they were there for each other and they are here for us. What also makes it so special is that in the 15 hits one of them was released after Freddie Mercury's death which breaks ones heart, but also makes us proud to see what he's done throughout his years of fame.

I would like to finish off and say that this album is important for everyone and it helps develop our own pop culture and knowledge on Queen. They have changed so much in music. In my opinion, without them rock would not be how it is nowadays. I would definitely recommend this album to anyone of any age and whatever music they listen to, because Queen is a group that everybody can love, especially if you're British.
